Breeding Curlews in Lincolnshire: History, Decline and Future Prospects

A copy of this report can be downloaded at - https://www.lincsbirdclub.co.uk/site/images/reports/Lincolnshire_Airfields_Curlew_Survey_2024.pdf

The Curlew is one of Britain's most distinctive birds, instantly recognisable by both its long, downcurved bill and evocative, bubbling call. While it remains a common winter visitor to the UK, particularly at internationally important sites such as The Wash and the Humber estuary, its breeding population has undergone a steep and troubling decline. By 2020, the UK breeding population was estimated at around 58,000 pairs – nearly half the number present just 20 years earlier. In lowland England, fewer than 300 pairs now remain.

In response, the Curlew Recovery Partnership was launched in 2021, bringing together leading conservation bodies to try to halt and reverse this decline.

Curlews in Lincolnshire

Curlews have never been widespread in Lincolnshire. Over the past four decades the county has supported between 30 and 50 pairs, concentrated in a few favoured sites. In recent years, however, their status has become increasingly uncertain. The Lincolnshire Bird Report recorded no confirmed breeding in the five years between 2017 and 2021.

At the same time, Curlew Action began a “head-starting” programme. Working under licence from Natural England at RAF airfields in the county, eggs were taken from nests where chicks would fail, hatched in captivity in Norfolk, and the young reared to fledging before being released at carefully chosen sites across southern England, but not Lincolnshire. This approach offers the prospect of improving productivity while addressing air safety concerns at active military bases.

A Turning Point

The discovery of more breeding pairs than had previously been known prompted discussion within the Lincolnshire Bird Club (LBC) committee in 2022. To better understand the situation, the club consulted with Curlew Action, Natural England, the British Trust for Ornithology (BTO), and the RAF Ornithological Society (RAFOS). It emerged that egg collection at airfields had been ongoing since 2021. These same licences had in the past permitted egg destruction or, in some cases, even the shooting of adults to reduce the risk of aircraft strikes.

Recognising how little was known about the county’s curlews, the LBC initiated a detailed breeding survey in 2024.

The 2024 Breeding Survey

The survey was carried out by LBC in partnership with Natural England and RAFOS, with advice from BTO. Six RAF airfields and their surrounding tetrads were surveyed using a modified BTO Atlas method, with early visits between 1 April–15 May and late visits from 16 May–30 June.

The results were striking. Twenty-nine breeding pairs were recorded across the six sites – representing around 10% of the entire lowland England population. Numbers were highest at Scampton (8 pairs), Cranwell (6), Barkston Heath (5), Digby (5), Waddington (4), and Coningsby (1).

Despite this encouraging total, productivity remained extremely low. Only two broods were seen during late visits – one at Cranwell and another at Digby, each with three chicks. It was not established whether these fledged successfully. This suggests an overall success rate of 0–20%, well below the 50% needed for a stable population.

At the same time, egg collection for the head-starting project removed 9 clutches (32 eggs) from Barkston Heath and 3 clutches (12 eggs) from Cranwell. Early evidence shows that head-started curlews may return at higher rates than wild-fledging birds: of 58 tracked individuals released, 65% returned to England in their second year.

Two former nesting grassland sites (Hawthorpe and Wickenby) were also surveyed, but no curlews were found. A wider search of county records through BirdTrack and eBird indicated probable breeding at five additional sites, and possible breeding at five more.

The 2024 survey has highlighted that Lincolnshire's airfields now hold a significant population of English lowland breeding Curlew – a fact not fully appreciated until recently. However, their breeding success is currently too low to maintain numbers without intervention.

The next challenge will be to explore management measures that can improve productivity, both on airfields and in surrounding habitats. These might include targeted predator control, changes in mowing regimes, or habitat enhancement and ultimately the release of head started Curlew juveniles.

As a red-listed species of the highest conservation concern, the Curlew's future in Lincolnshire depends on sustained cooperation between conservation bodies, land managers and the RAF. The survey of 2024 provides the first clear baseline for that work – and a reminder that even small county populations can play a vital role in the survival of one of Britain's most iconic birds. English Coastal Path Cuts a Swathe through Donna Nook

The long-term plan to create a footpath around the coast of England came a step closer to fruition in May when the section from Mablethorpe to the Humber bridge was opened.

The path at Donna Nook was always going to be difficult as much of the foreshore from Stonebridge down to Quad 3 is closed from the end of October to early January because of the extensive Grey Seal breeding colony.

Fellow Louth LBC member Geoff Mullett told me a couple of months ago that there was a new path through the dunes that opened up interesting possibilities, but I only just got round to walking it on July 26th. Older birders will remember Ponderosa (now RAF Donna Nook) and the area south through Coastguards to the old Plantation north of Quad 3 as being a fantastic area for rarities and passage migrants in the 70s and 80s. Access through here became increasing difficult until it was banned from the early 90s. Now all that has changed.

This is important to Lincs birders as per Birds of Lincolnshire (2021) Donna Nook has the second highest bird list of any site in the county (277) behind Gibraltar Point (325) and ahead of Saltfleetby-Theddlethorpe (274) and Frampton Marsh (262).

The new path cuts through the dunes from the south end of the LWT seal track and is fenced on both sides through to the RAF watch tower and base. It is rough cut and unsurfaced along the entire length and the vegetation is already growing back rapidly. It looks perfect for viewing migrants! It crosses the public footpath at RAF Donna Nook and delves through parts of the dunes; cut through impenetrable buckthorn I have never been through before. In this section the path is fenced on the sea

Path entrance south from RAF Donna Nook.

Looking south through virgin dunes ward side only. It crosses close to the old Coastguard lookout by Coastguard cottages and the middle RAF look out tower.

Around fifteen years ago an area of dune scrub was cleared just south of here to create a dune grassland “savannah” with isolated hawthorn and elder bushes. Just before this point the path cuts through to the rear of the dunes and continues south along the bottom of the old Plantation to join up with the end of the new sea defence wall north of Quad 3. This part of the path immediately adjacent to an arable field, (where in my mind’s eye I still see a mown meadow with 6 stack bales covered in Wrynecks and Red-backed Shrikes in a classic fall in September 1976), is impassable due to nettles and thistles so as I was wearing shorts I resorted to the top of the dune to get past it.

The new sea wall is mown by EA and easy walking, and I went as far south as the old girder bridge then cut across to the dunes, over the well vegetated sandflats to the tide edge and walked back north to Stonebridge car park. It makes a great seven mile walk. If you are not a skilled tight rope walker, avoid the bridge and take the short cut at the Quad 3 lookout tower (the bottom blue loop on the map) which is much easier. Keep in mind you can only do this from Friday afternoon to Sunday evening as the foreshore is closed the rest of the week for RAF activities. You can however walk along the front of the dunes all week outside the seal season as shown on the map.

This new path has massive birding potential, so I would encourage you to check it out. On a quiet July day, I had 53 species of bird and 5 of mammals on my jaunt. If you go out on the tideline keep your dog on a lead and use your common sense, as there are herds of literally thousands of seals basking on the beach.

The Coastal Path is not completed around Immingham as yet. On The Wash a footbridge is to be built across the Steeping at Gibraltar Point this autumn making it possible to walk along the coast from Grimsby to Cley!

I would be interested to know if anyone has yet attempted to walk the coast from Alkborough to Nene Mouth. Please let me know if/when you have done it.

Northumberland Birding Holiday: November 2nd-6th

There are still some spaces on the LBC's birding 'safari' to Northumberland between Sunday November 2 - Thursday November 6 this year.

Accommodation will be at The White Swan hotel, in the historic market town of Alnwick.

Included will be:

- Coach travel to and from the hotel with pick-ups in and around Lincoln and Grimsby/ Cleethorpes
- Four nights' hotel accommodation with evening meal and breakfast
- The proposed itinerary includes Holy Island (Lindisfarne), Druridge Pools and/or Alnmouth Bay plus other birding destinations (with the Wooler at the foot of the Cheviot Hills one of those under consideration).

The price is quite low for an all-inclusive birding holiday - £375 per person based on two sharing a room.

There may also be some single room availability (again £375 per person).

Nothing is guaranteed, but we will certainly be watching out for an extensive range of wader, geese and duck species, perhaps a few late shearwaters on the move and maybe some divers out to sea.

Also possible are Shorelarks, Snow Buntings and Purple Sandpipers. Further inland, scarce passerines such as Yellow-browed Warbler and Pallas Warbler could put in an appearance.

If conditions are right, there may even be spectacular 'drops' of winter migrants such as Redwings, Fieldfares, Goldcrests and, who knows, an early party or two of Waxwings?

Northumberland has an impressive record of pulling in vagrants at all times of year - During part of August 2025, for instance, a Black-winged Pratincole was at East Chevington not far from where we are staying.

Heavy duty members of our party may well want to strike out on their own, but not everyone can walk long distances at a time, so we'll be mindful of those who might not be as fit as they once were. No one will get left behind!

Whatever happens, the holiday will be full of hospitality in the best Northumberland traditions, the camaraderie of fellow-travellers and the chance to meet up with old friends and make new ones.

If husbands, wives or partners don't want to go birding, there are plenty of other options - Newcastle-upon-Tyne is a bus ride away, and there are castles, gardens and other attractions.

As with three previous LBC holidays in the Cairngorms, the club has put together the package in conjunction with Goole-based Cairngorm Travel.

Bookings are with Sarah, Selina or one of their colleagues at Cairngorm Travel: 01405 761334. They're all very helpful and knowledgeable. The reference is: November birding holiday.

The LBC Report 2023

The 2023 LBC Report was circulated to members around two months ago, and feedback has been overwhelmingly positive. Members recognise the huge amount of work put in by our team of volunteers to produce such a detailed and comprehensive report.

However, one recurring issue raised in recent years concerns the contributors list. As the number of observers continues to grow—now hundreds of people generating literally thousands of records—it becomes increasingly difficult to ensure that no one is left out. Inevitably, occasional omissions occur.

To see how others manage the same challenge, we contacted several counties and received the following insights:

- Norfolk: The contributors list is the single biggest source of complaints, usually around omissions, spelling errors, or incorrect initials. Until recently Norfolk published all contributors, including those submitting via BirdTrack, eBird, and clubs, but this now exceeds 3,000 names and takes up excessive space. Their solution has been to publish the full list online, with only a link in the report. They also follow the BBRC style of listing initials and surnames to save space.
- Cumbria: They try to include all observers but acknowledge inevitable omissions, particularly with anonymised eBird submissions. Observers who report Rarities and Vagrants are always credited, while those who refuse descriptions are not. Ultimately, they place greater emphasis on the accuracy and quality of the bird records rather than personal recognition.
- Hampshire: With over 700,000 records in 2024 and around 4,000 user IDs, inconsistencies are common—especially when observers appear under multiple IDs across platforms. They only tend to receive complaints when active birders are omitted, but they note the motivational value of seeing names in print for encouraging tomorrow's birders.
- Leicestershire & Rutland: Initials are published in species accounts, and the contributors list is taken from their database. 2024 will be their first year integrating BirdTrack and eBird submissions, so they are watching carefully for issues. Anonymous records are not used unless they can be verified.
- Radnorshire: They highlight privacy concerns, noting that named observers have previously been targeted by local organisations. Contributors need to be aware that their names may appear in reports or online, and that not all BirdTrack submissions are automatically accessible to county recorders.
- Northamptonshire: Their list credits observers submitting directly (email, message, Excel, written), but with the rise of BirdTrack, eBird, and iRecord, they now exclude those contributors and instead issue a general thank-you to them in the report.

How you can help??

Managing the contributors list is now a major task, and we would greatly value extra help. We are looking for a volunteer whose main role would be to maintain the list and ensure that observers submitting important records are acknowledged at the back of the report.

If you are interested in helping with this vital part of the Report, please get in touch via info@lincsbirds.co.uk

Colour-ring sighting Control at Gibraltar Point

Colour ringed Cormorant at Gib Point on 6th August 2025 © Nigel Lound

A Cormorant that was spotted on Tennyson's Sands, 6th August 2025, firstly by Mick Briggs and then the ring being read and photographed by Nigel Lound has already been reported back on courtesy of Kieran Foster of the Merseyside Ringing Group: a bird originally ringed on the 18th June 2025 at Hale Duck Decoy in Cheshire. Orange Darvic ring number "408" is just 2 months old and it shows an un-expected eastward movement so quickly after fledging. This bird's metal ring number is "5290385", which we would never have been able to read in the field - colour-rings triumph again!

Thanks to the Gib Point Blog - <https://gibraltarpointbirdobservatory.blogspot.com/> for reporting this interesting movement...

Finally...

The website is currently undergoing a major overhaul as we upgrade the software that runs the entire system. This has meant reinstalling and reconfiguring various add-ons, including the PayPal system, online forms, and video tools. After a few false starts, we think we're nearly there!

If all goes to plan, the full upgrade will be completed in early August, after which we can begin refreshing the site's design and layout. So—watch this space!
